

Four Favorite Risk Reads for Risk Champions

Resource Type: Risk eNews Topic: General

Here's our third list of inspiring reads for nonprofit risk professionals.

Rethinking Risk Management: Critically Examining Old Ideas and New Concepts

Craining our needs anu new concept By Rick Nason The length of this book balles the wisdom The length of this book balles the wisdom our state of the length of the second business, from the all-too-familiar risk framework to the wisdom of using a risk framework to the wisdom of using a risk the second ball of the second ball of the second management process. In the chapter titled, A comprehensive framework creates the illusion that everything is covered. However, there is value in feeling exposed. Nason's chapter on read among the members of the Fail 2018 Risk Leadership Certificate Program cohort.

In this fascinating book, Addeson explains why familiar, factory-inspired approaches don't work for knowledge workers, and may even "make wicked problems appear tame." In a chapter on "Conversations for aligning: openness, commitments, and accountability," the author urge leaders to create a "reperticier of conversations to help alimove negotiate through the thicker of fough problems, get unstuck and align".

The Power Paradox

3

In Power Parauux By Dacher Keither The author of this thought-provoking book explores a The author of this thought-provoking book explores a We gain and maintain power through empathy, but as we experience power we lose our focus on others. Use the provided of the second second second when we are feeling power through giving, but when we are feeling power law to diminished trust in the workplace.

Trust and purpose reinforce each other; high-trust cultures are key to achieving an ambitious mission, managing downside risks, and seizing opportunities to grow and thrive.

THE POWER PARADOX 🗢

Getting Things Done By David Allen

NRMC Risk Leadership Certificate Program participant Julie Reyburn recommends this risk read because "mastering workflow helps mitigate the risk of missing a critical step." mitigate the risk of missing a critical step. Leadership guru Frances Heeselbain also leadership guru Frances Heeselbain also purpose, the essential nature of relaxation, and deceptively simple guidelines for getting things done. He employs extensive experience, personal stories, and his own recipe for simplicity, speed, and fun."

We view book recommendations as gifts.

Want to share a book recommendation that belongs on our next list of riveting reads?

Email info@nonprofitrisk.org to share your book review. Let us know how the book could inspire nonprofit risk management professionals.

To learn more about risk-themed books published by the Nonprofit Risk Management Center, visit: www.nonprofitrisk.org/products

Nonprofit Risk Management Center 204 South King Street (Leesburg, VA 20175